

Fear of Inflation: Exchange Rate Pass-Through in East Asia

KANG Sammo, WANG Yunjong

The purpose of this paper is to examine path-through of exchange rates on import prices, producer prices, and consumer prices of a few selected East Asian countries – Australia, Japan, Korea and Singapore. Our empirical question relates to whether three different price indices respond differently to exchange rate changes and if so, why.
