

Competitiveness and the Equilibrium Real Exchange Rate in Croatia

KARPOWICZ Izabela

The present study examines several indicators of external competitiveness and estimates the real exchange rate misalignment for Croatia for the recent transition period. While current indicators are mostly positive and the misalignment is moderate, the decline in export market shares and the cost-induced real appreciation threatens competitiveness and thus deserves further attention and exploration.
